“Adversity and Cardiovascular Disease: Mapping Sociobiological Mechanisms and Precision Health Interventions”

There is no corporate support for this activity

This course will fulfill the licensure requirement set forth by the State of Connecticut

ACCREDITATION:

The Yale School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

Attending physicians, house staff, fellows, medical students, PA's

NEEDS ASSESSMENT:

It has become increasingly recognized that adversity is associated with adverse cardiovascular health outcomes. Clinicians need to know about the association between adversity and health outcomes, the possible underlying mechanisms, and potential preventive and therapeutic interventions.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

1. To define adversity and its pathophysiologic relationship to cardiovascular health
2. To characterize population-based adversity and cardiovascular disease
3. To discuss novel precision public health approaches targeting adversity-cardiovascular health outcomes

DESIGNATION STATEMENT

The Yale School of Medicine designates this live activity for 1 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)[™]. Physicians should only claim the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.
