Gabrielle W. Peters, MD, has been named an Assistant Professor in the Department of Therapeutic Radiology and cares for patients with thoracic, head and neck, genitourinary, and gastrointestinal malignancies. She sees patients as part of the Smilow Cancer Hospital Care Centers in Guilford and Trumbull.

Dr. Peters received her medical degree from Creighton University School of Medicine and was chosen to be inducted into Alpha Omega Alpha. She completed her residency and fellowship training at Yale, and served as the Education Chief Resident for the 2021-2022 academic year. She was a leader in her residency as an advocate for patients throughout her training. During her training at Yale, she opened an investigator-initiated trial for lung cancer and received grant funding through the Radiological Society of North America for her work in medical education. Her research interests include medical education and improving clinical outcomes for patients with cancer.
