

Digestive Diseases Research Seminar Series

Presented by

Yale School of Medicine, Department of Internal Medicine, Section of Digestive Diseases

“The Dark Side of the Moon: A Different Perspective of Hepatitis C”

Theo Heller, MD

National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases

Date: January 17, 2017

Location: TAC S-247

Time: 5:00pm-6:00pm

Host: Dr. Silvia Vilarinho

There is no corporate support for this activity

This course will fulfill the licensure requirement set forth by the State of Connecticut

ACCREDITATION

The Yale School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Yale Medical School Faculty, Fellows, & Staff
Local GI Physicians

NEEDS ASSESSMENT

The intention of this course is to explore how translational research can play an essential role in developing not only an understanding of disease processes but also uncover new questions and avenues of research. The course will explore some of the factors related to liver disease progression in chronic hepatitis C virus infection in humans in a translational model.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this activity, participants will be able to:

- Understand the importance of a multidisciplinary approach in translational research.
- Understand how hepatitis C virus infection can be used as a model system to study liver disease progression even more so now that it is curable.

-Understanding liver disease progression in the context of the microbiome may allow for novel therapeutic interventions.

DESIGNATION STATEMENT

The Yale School of Medicine designates this live activity for 1 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)[™]. Physicians should only claim the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

FACULTY DISCLOSURES

Theo Heller - NONE

It is the policy of Yale School of Medicine, Continuing Medical Education, to ensure balance, independence, objectivity and scientific rigor in all its educational programs. All faculty participating as speakers in these programs are required to disclose any relevant financial relationship(s) they (or spouse or partner) have with a commercial interest that benefits the individual in any financial amount that has occurred within the past 12 months; and the opportunity to affect the content of CME about the products or services of the commercial interests. The Center for Continuing Medical Education will ensure that any conflicts of interest are resolved before the educational activity occurs.