Attending physicians, house staff, fellows, medical students, PA's

NEEDS ASSESSMENT:

Alcohol use disorder is highly prevalent, affecting over 7% of adults in the United States. Clinicians need to know how to recognize the features of alcohol use disorder, and to understand treatment options including pharmacotherapies.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this activity, participants will be able to:

1. Recognize the salient features of alcohol use disorder (AUD) and identify when pharmacotherapy is an option.
2. Compare and contrast pharmacotherapy options for the treatment of AUD and identify which might be most appropriate in certain common clinical settings.
3. Understand the many barriers that have hindered the adoption of effective AUD pharmacotherapies.

DESIGNATION STATEMENT:

The Yale School of Medicine designates this live activity for 1 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)TM. Physicians should only claim the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.
