Christi Kim, MD, has been named an Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine (Medical Oncology) and joined the Smilow Cancer Hospital Care Center in Waterford, CT. Dr. Kim is a general medical oncologist with special interests in gynecologic cancers, breast cancer, and lymphoma. She received her medical degree from St. George's University School of Medicine and completed both a fellowship and residency at Stony Brook University Hospital where she was on the faculty as an Assistant Professor of Medicine.

Dr. Kim is an active member of the Gynecologic Oncology Group (GOG) Foundation and the Society of Gynecologic Oncology (SGO) Clinical Practice

Committee. She recently co-authored the SGO clinical practice guidelines and has served on advisory boards for The Caris Precision Oncology Alliance Working Group in gynecologic cancers. She has published in several journals including Blood, Journal of the American Society of Nephrology, and ASCO abstracts related to proteinuria with bevacizumab. Dr. Kim works in collaboration with a team of medical oncologists, hematologists, and radiation oncologists to provide expert care and support to patients and families in southeastern Connecticut and the surrounding communities.
