Neocolonialism and Global Health:
A Conversation with Rafael Pérez-Escamilla, PhD

Thursday, October 8th
7:30pm via Zoom

Rafael Pérez-Escamilla is a Professor of Public Health and Director of the Yale School of Public Global Health Concentration and the Office of Public Health Practice

COVID-19 has highlighted strong and persistent Global Health inequities. The conversation will elicit reflections on the unjust Global Health systems we have and how we can change them.

All participants will be entered into raffle to win
A History of Global Health:
Interventions into the Lives of Other People
by Randall M. Packard

Register: http://cglink.me/r831525 or email anjuli.bodyk@yale.edu

Co-sponsored by the Yale School of Public Health’s
Global Health Concentration and Office of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion