In this talk, Dr. Dean will describe novel, adaptive strategies for evaluating the efficacy of candidate vaccines during public health emergencies. This includes the use of flexible, responsive designs to follow an outbreak as it moves. Dr. Dean will also describe the use of ensemble forecast modeling to prioritize trial sites for selection. Applications to Ebola, Zika, and COVID-19 vaccine efficacy trials are discussed.