Greg Licholai MD, '95, MBA, has more than 25 years of experience in biotechnology leadership, in both consulting and entrepreneurial capacities. He is president of Elpidera LLC, the third venture company formed by Moderna Therapeutics of Cambridge, Mass., and Stockholm, Sweden. Elpidera—whose name is derived from the Greek word for hope—is focused on the discovery of new therapies for rare diseases, using Moderna's proprietary messenger RNA technology. His prior roles include those of senior vice president at Quintiles, partner-level consultant at McKinsey & Co., chief operating officer of Proteostasis, senior executive at Amicus Therapeutics, and co-founder of Immunome.

Alumni Grand Rounds brings YSM alumni and students together for career-focused discussions about medicine and biomedical science.
