ACCREDITATION:

The Yale School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

ObGyn attending physicians, house staff/fellows, medical students, nurses, PA's, community Ob/Gyn's, residents, midwives, nurses and researchers.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT:

Historical and sociological methods are used to explain why there has been so little attention to men's reproductive health. The causes and consequences will be explained in detail on the lack of biomedical, public health, and social scientific attention to men's reproductive health.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

At the end of this presentation, attendees will be able to:

1. Learn how gendered understandings of the human body influence which questions biomedical scientists ask about women and men;
2. Learn about the history of medical knowledge-making about men's reproductive health and how individual men think about their role in reproductive outcomes
3. Learn about the need for biomedical researchers, clinicians, and public health professionals to pay more attention to men's role in reproductive health.
