ACCREDITATION:

The Yale School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

Attending physicians, house staff, fellows, medical students, PA's

NEEDS ASSESSMENT:

The COVID-19 pandemic has presented an urgent need for care of potentially overwhelming numbers of critically ill patients. Clinicians need to know about the diverse manifestations of COVID-19 in critically ill patients, and understand the therapeutic and logistical challenges to providing the massive expansion of critical care services necessitated by the pandemic.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

1. To understand the familiar and less familiar manifestations of COVID19 in the critically ill patient
2. To understand the challenges inherent in a pandemic requiring massive expansion of critical care and mechanical ventilation services
3. To know some of the long-term implications of these challenges

DESIGNATION STATEMENT

The Yale School of Medicine designates this live activity for 1 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)TM. Physicians should only claim the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.
