ACCREDITATION

The Yale School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Attending physicians, researchers, house staff, fellows, residents, medical students, nurses.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT

All integrated laboratory network is a key asset for a health system but may be under appreciated by health system corporate leadership. Fortunate is the laboratory that has both developed critical valuation statements for health system stake-holders and has effectively communicated quantitative evidence supporting that valuation. The same holds true for laboratory valuation by such stake-holders as consumers, payers and health care providers. The COVID-19 crisis has provided major visibility for the clinical laboratory, but has this visibility translated into appreciation of laboratory value? Beyond that, what is the value that a department of academic pathology brings to the total equation of American health care?

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this activity, participants will be able to:

- Understand how departments of academic pathology can make a unique contribution to the next era of health care.
- Understand the pain-points of key stake-holders in health care.

- Leverage the recent visibility of laboratory testing to enhance the perceived value of the clinical laboratory.
