There is no corporate or grant support for this activity. This course will fulfill the licensure requirement set forth by the State of Connecticut.

ACCREDITATION

The Yale School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Attending physicians, researchers, house staff, fellows, residents, medical students, nurses.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT

Anogenital mucosal melanomas are very rare but extremely aggressive tumors compared to the more common cutaneous melanomas. However, due to their rarity and lack of anogenital melanoma specific staging systems, they are staged according to the criteria derived for cutaneous melanomas. This talk will focus on pathologic evaluation and staging of anogenital melanomas (in particular vulvar and anorectal melanomas), in comparison to cutaneous melanomas.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this activity, participants will be able to:

- Understand the similarities and differences in demographic, clinical and histopathological characteristics of anogenital and cutaneous melanomas.
- Identify the key histopathologic features of primary tumor that contribute to outcome in vulvar melanoma patients.
- Identify the key histopathologic features of prognostic significance in primary anorectal melanomas.

DESIGNATION STATEMENT

The Yale School of Medicine designates this live activity for 1 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)[™]. Physicians should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.
