Mariya Rozenblit, MD, Instructor of Medicine (Medical Oncology), now cares for patients at the Smilow Cancer Hospital Care Center in Greenwich, in addition to her clinic in New Haven. Dr. Rozenblit received her medical degree from Icahn School of Medicine and completed her Fellowship in Medical Oncology-Hematology at Yale.

In 2020, Dr. Rozenblit was the recipient of the ASCO Conquer Cancer Foundation Young Investigator Award for her project, "Using single nucleotide variants of high functional importance to predict the risk of developing breast cancer in young women with high-risk family history." This award is for promising investigators to encourage and promote quality research in clinical oncology. In 2022, she was awarded a Lion Heart grant for her project "Epigenetic Age Acceleration as a Predictor of Breast Cancer Risk." At the Smilow Care Center in Greenwich, Dr. Rozenblit focuses on the care of patients with breast cancer, and partners with both surgical and radiation oncology experts to provide care to those in lower Fairfield County and Westchester County, New York.
