NEEDS ASSESSMENT

Regulatory guidance for the development of drugs for type 2 diabetes changed dramatically in 2008 with the requirement to prove CV safety in large-scale CV outcomes trials. Now 10 years later with the completion of 16 trials, and abundance of data is now available and should be incorporated into routine clinical practice as supported by numerous society guidelines and consensus recommendations around the world and across cardiology and endocrinology organizations.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this activity, participants will be able to:

1. Understand the evolution of the regulation of drugs for type 2 diabetes
2. Understand the primary and key secondary results from CV outcomes trial in type 2 diabetes completed to date
3. Review key aspects of contemporary clinical care guidelines and consensus recommendations for patients with type 2 diabetes with regard to CV risk mitigation
