ACCREDITATION

The Yale School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Attending physicians, house staff, fellows, medical students, nurses, physician assistants.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT

COVID-19 has brought unique challenges to the management of sleep laboratories and patients with sleep disorders including the shutdown of most sleep laboratories and transition to virtual visits. New protocols and guidelines will be needed at local and national levels for providers, DME suppliers and insurers to support these changes in care.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this talk, individuals will:

1. Understand the changes that occurred in sleep medicine in response to the COVID pandemic
2. Understand the concerns of physicians and concerns related to keeping patients and healthcare workers safe

3. Discuss future steps that may be taken by providers, suppliers and national organizations to support sleep medicine as we transition toward a new normal.

DESIGNATION STATEMENT

The Yale School of Medicine designates this live activity for 1 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)TM. Physicians should only claim the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.
