“Donor Kidney Quality and Acute Kidney Injury with Transplantation”

Thursday, June 20, 2013- 8:30am-Fitkin Amphitheatre

NEEDS ASSESSMENT:

Kidney transplantation is the best long-term treatment for end-stage renal disease. Clinicians need to identify patients who are potential candidates for kidney donation. They therefore need to understand factors that affect donor kidney quality.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

At the conclusion of this activity, participants will be able:

-  To discuss the role of kidney transplantation in end-stage renal disease.
-  To describe the historical paradigm for assessing deceased-donor kidney quality and its impact on outcomes in transplantation.
-  To review newer methods for assessing quality in deceased-donor kidney transplantation and the potential impact of donor acute kidney injury.
