

Frequently Asked Questions: InMOTION Mobile Pharmacy and Clinic

What is InMOTION mobile pharmacy and clinic?

InMOTION is a mobile pharmacy clinic program run through Yale Medicine and Yale New Haven Health System (YNHHS) that offers pharmaceutical and clinical services through the first legalized mobile retail pharmacy in Connecticut. Our team of a pharmacist and clinicians on the mobile pharmacy/clinic and Community Health Workers in the community all work together to provide access to pharmacy services and health care as well as linkage to social services to community members wherever they are. The mobile pharmacy and clinic provides a private and confidential space for people's health care needs.

Who can be treated?

Anyone who could benefit from the accessibility of mobile pharmacy and clinical services should utilize our services. If you have difficulty making it to medical appointments or picking up medications because you do not have transportation, have young children, support family members living with disability, or are currently unhoused and in need of services where you are, the InMOTION mobile pharmacy can bring vaccinations, medications, and clinical care and disease management to you.

What conditions can be treated?

Common conditions like high blood pressure and diabetes can be screened for, and treated with, our primary care services. We also offer testing and treatment for HIV, HCV, and STIs; prevention for HIV (PrEP), as well as wound care, mental health care, diagnosis and treatment of substance use disorders including opioid and alcohol use disorder, and more.

How did this project begin?

Sandra Springer, MD, a Yale Medicine infectious diseases physician and professor of Medicine at Yale School of Medicine, envisioned a mobile healthcare system to bring primary, infectious disease, substance use disorder, and commonly needed clinical care and importantly the medications to people where they live. Connecticut is the only state where retail mobile pharmacies are legalized as of July 1, 2023. Dr. Springer was awarded an Avant Garde Award in 2022 by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA), which has funded this revolutionary initiative. YNHHS provides the pharmacy services for InMOTION.
