Mr. Yelpaala is an entrepreneur and public health practitioner with a deep understanding of health systems and 20 years of experience working across the public and private sectors in the United States, East and West Africa, and the Caribbean.

Prior to co-founding InOn Health in 2018, Mr. Yelpaala founded access.mobile International, where he is the Chair of the organization. access.mobile is a global digital health company that develops solutions to improve access to health information and services through mobile technology. The company, which has implemented programs in 13 African countries, is currently working in several countries in southern Africa.

Mr. Yelpaala served as one of the early employees of the Clinton Health Access Initiative and worked as a management consultant for Dalberg Global Development Advisors. In early 2021, he was appointed by Governor Jared Polis to serve on the Colorado eHealth Commission. He is the incoming Chair of the commission and its digital health equity lead. KP also serves on the Yale School of Public Health Leadership Council.