NEEDS ASSESSMENT

Oligometastatic cancer is a new paradigm in oncology. A subset of cancer patients with metastatic disease may be candidates for local therapies to achieve control of metastatic sites, with improved survival. The international lung cancer staging system recognizes this group of patients with oligometastatic disease among patients with Stage IV lung cancer. For these patients, a treatment approach beyond standard palliative care should be considered.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this talk, individuals will:

1. Understand the concept of oligometastatic disease
2. Distinguish between oligometastatic vs metastatic cancer

3. Review the impact of oligometastatic disease on treatment of Stage IV lung cancer
