“Teaching End of Life Care: Good for the Student, the Patient and the Teacher”

Thursday, July 25, 2013 - 8:30am-Fitkin Amphitheatre

NEEDS ASSESSMENT:

Helping patients and families transition the goals of care at the end-of-life poses unique challenges and requires specific knowledge and skills. There is a need for physicians in training and those already in practice to be aware of resources and strategies available to enhance skills and to be well positioned to role model and teach these skills to others.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

At the conclusion of this activity Participants will be able:

*To understand components of the Yale longitudinal medical student End-of-Life (EoL) care curriculum.

*To appreciate the benefits of dedicated EoL care education for students, patients and faculty.

*To appreciate how EoL care education is a model for: patient-centered care and interprofessional education.

*To consider ways that you can contribute to EoL care education.
