100 Years of Women at Yale School of Medicine: Celebration and Reflection

In celebration of the contributions of women faculty and alumnae from the School of Medicine, this symposium features speakers discussing the challenges for women in their fields, as well as those encountered on the pathway to finding work-life balance.

This daylong event is free, including complimentary meals, and open to all faculty, students, staff, alumnae/alumni, and clinicians in the community. It will conclude with a networking reception following the last session.

To register for the symposium, contribute to our archive of distinguished women, learn about the women featured above, or share your story, visit our website:
