Special Seminar: Chalk Talk

Joan Y. Chiao, Ph.D.

Director, International Cultural Neuroscience Consortium

presents:

“Social Neuroscience and Mental Health”

Dr. Chiao is passionate about conducting research and teaching in a way that unites theory and methods in psychology, neuroscience and genetics that provides us truly novel opportunities to construct more parsimonious theories about the origins of human diversity. She is also deeply motivated by the potential broader implications of cultural neuroscience arch for informing lay people and scientists alike on complex issues such as public policy, interethnic ideology, biomedical ethics and population health disparities. This “chalk talk” will introduce the concept of social neuroscience and its importance to public health.
