NEEDS ASSESSMENT

The current SARS-CoV-2 pandemic has accelerated the need for telemedicine in the United States. With the landscape changed, more patients than ever before are accessing telehealth services. This talk will serve as a primer for telemedicine and delve into the history of telemedicine, discuss how the COVID-19 pandemic created rules which empower telemedicine visits, and talk about implementation and the future of telehealth in the U.S. It is relevant for all current practitioners and for those who will practice in the future.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this talk, participants will learn

I. To discuss the history of telemedicine in the U.S.

2. To evaluate how the COVID-19 pandemic has accelerated the timeline for telehealth delivery.

3. To review how to setup an office-based telemedicine program.

DESIGNATION STATEMENT

The Yale School of Medicine designates this live activity for I AMA PRA Category I Credit(s)TM. Physicians should only claim the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.
