EARTH DAY 50TH COMMEMORATION
IN CONVERSATION WITH ANDREW GARLING ’68

On April 22, 1970, six activists—including Andrew Garling ’68—organized a historic event that drew 20 million Americans (at the time, 10% of the total U.S. population) to participate in massive protests, rallies and demonstrations across the country and to advocate for greater environmental protections and a cleaner, healthier, more sustainable planet. That event was EARTH DAY.

Over the years Earth Day has grown to more than one billion people in 192 countries participating in related activities each year, making it one of the largest movements on the planet.

With April 22, 2020 marking the 50th anniversary of this historic event, join us on this special day for an exclusive conversation with Garling to hear his thoughts, insights and perspectives on Earth Day, from its auspicious beginnings five decades ago to its lasting impact today, and possibilities for the future.
