GRAND ROUNDS LECTURE

"Breast Pathology in the Molecular Era"

Thursday, August 6, 2020 12:30 p.m.

Zoom Meeting ID: 96132158524 Password: emailed separately Host: Malini Harigopal, MD

There is no corporate or grant support for this activity. This course will fulfill the licensure requirement set forth by the State of Connecticut.

ACCREDITATION

The Yale School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Attending physicians, researchers, house staff, fellows, residents, medical students, nurses.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT

The talk wil focus on prognostication of breast cancer in the molecular era and the role of molecular analyses, and how these changes contribute to disease pathogenesis, overall outcome, and therapeutic response. The presenter will also show studies which demonstrate the need for caution interpretation of molecular studies and novel methods to study breast cancer. LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this activity, participants will be able to:

 Understand molecular assays for breast cancer prognostication.

Recognize strengths and limitations of various molecular approaches.

 Recognize the importance of ESRP1 in breast cancer and its role in controlling alternative splicing in breast cancer.

DESIGNATION STATEMENT

The Yale School of Medicine designates this live activity for 1 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)TM. Physicians should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.
