ACCREDITATION:

The Yale School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

ObGyn attending physicians, house staff/fellows, medical students, nurses, PA's, community Ob/Gyn's, residents, midwives, nurses and researchers.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT:

Guidelines for diagnosis and management of chronic hypertension have recently changed but the implications for pregnancy remain undefined. Chronic hypertension is a major cause of morbidity in pregnancy but the role of anti-hypertensive therapy remains uncertain. Data on racial disparities in the outcomes of hypertension in pregnancy are needed to target intervention.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

At the end of this presentation, attendees will be able to:

1. Outline and Contrast ACOG, JNC 8 and AHA criteria for hypertension and treatment guidelines and describe racial differences;
2. Describe short- and long-term maternal and offspring outcomes of HTN in pregnancy and racial differences; and
3. Discuss emerging concepts for anti-hypertensive therapy in pregnancy.

DESIGNATION STATEMENT
