

Cancer in LGBT Communities: from Risk to Survivorship

Liz Margolies, LCSW

Liz Margolies, founder and executive director of the LGBT Cancer Network, has 25 years of experience serving the LGBT community, with a special focus on cancer. Under her leadership, the LGBT Cancer Network has conducted seminal original research on cancer among LGBT populations, and has developed a variety of programs and resources to better serve LGBT cancer patients and educate providers.

Please join OutPatient (the Yale School of Medicine LGBTIQ student interest group), the Yale Cancer Student Interest Group and the Office of Diversity and Health Equity at the Yale Cancer Center for her engaging presentation, which will cover risk, disparities, experiences of cancer treatment, and survivorship among LGBT populations. A short Question and Answer session will follow.

All Yale students, clinicians, staff, and administrators are welcome to attend. Light refreshments will be provided.

Friday, January 23rd, 1:00 – 2:30 pm
Jane Ellen Hope Building, Room 103
315 Cedar Street
