The student-run Bioethics Interest Group (BIG) offers a monthly forum for medical, nursing, public health, and physician associate students at Yale University School of Medicine to explore issues related to ethics in the training, practice, governance, history, and philosophy of medicine. The group offers educational seminars, advocates for the medical ethics in the greater Yale community, and facilitates health care students' participation in the ethical life of the medical center and university at large.

Dinner will be provided and an RSVP is requested for each meeting. RSVP to 203.737.5943 or karen.kolb@yale.edu
