“Challenges of Medical Training”

Are you attending? Yes or No? Click Here

Facilitator: Alice Papsun, MD

Lecturer; Director, Psychiatric Consultation to Primary Care
Yale School of Medicine – Department of Psychiatry

Dr. Papsun is an attending working as an educator and consultant in psychiatry for the Primary Care Center at Yale. She maintains a very active out-patient practice in psychiatry in the community with a particular commitment to working with housestaff and attendings from Yale. Dr. Papsun serves as a member of a triad of physicians in the YNHH Wellness Initiative and is responsible for the psychiatric care for interns, residents and fellows referred for treatment.

Dr. Papsun is an experienced educator and lecturer in diverse areas of the psychiatric field. Most recently, she has focused on examining the developmental stages and challenges that students, interns and residents experience during their medical education and how these life phases dovetail with their experiences in medical training. Dr. Papsun illustrates how trainees confront their personal life milestone events while being exposed to sentinel clinical experiences and the challenges and difficulties that all too frequently arise.

Learning Objectives:

At the end of this session, the participant will be able to:

- Describe Normative Development (Late Adolescence and Adulthood)
- Explore the Challenges of Medical Training
- Identify Strategies to Cope with Life Stress
