EMD Seminar Series

Julie Thwing, MD
Medical Epidemiologist
Strategic Applied Science Unit
Malaria Branch
Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

“Malaria Girl: A career in malaria epidemiology, control, and surveillance”

Julie Thwing will share the life experiences that led to a career in public health, including growing up in sub-Saharan Africa. She will discuss the Epidemic Intelligence Service as career path and her experience as an EIS Officer. She will discuss her work in the CDC Malaria Branch, both in Atlanta and internationally, and current research interests. Finally, we'll discuss how some of the lessons learned in malaria apply to the COVID epidemic.
